

onal guests, Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, the chairman of the House of Bishops, Bishop Doane, of Albany, who, next to Bishop Tuttle, is the senior bishop of the church, and Bishop Greer, the Bishop-Coadjutor of New York, and head of the Men's Thank Offering movement.

Among those who have already arrived in Richmond and established themselves in comfortable quarters are the secretaries of both houses of the convention. Rev. Samuel Hart, D. D., the secretary of the House of Bishops, is stopping at Murphy's, and expects this morning to open his headquarters in one of the committee rooms in the State Capitol.

Dr. Hart expressed his approval last night of the plans made by the local committee of arrangements. He had not made a careful examination of the State Capitol Building, but from a glance through the building, Dr. Hart said that it was quite certain that the House of Bishops would be most comfortable there, and in fact, that the conveniences provided were just what were suited to their needs. The hall of the House of Delegates in the Capitol is provided with 100 seats, and there are 104 shops on the roof of that house, several of whom will be unable to attend this meeting.

Seating Deputies. Late yesterday afternoon the final plans were made for seating the delegates in St. Paul's Church according to the rule of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies, the delegations are seated by lot, the secretary of the house drawing for the various delegations in the presence of a committee from the delegation of the diocese in which the convention meets. According to the table Mr. Joseph Bryan and Rev. William Meade Clark met Dr. Anstie at St. Paul's Church yesterday afternoon and drew the lots for the seating of the various delegations. Each diocese is assigned two pews, the four clerical delegates sitting in front and the four lay delegates behind them.

By each delegation is to be elected a standard with the name of the diocese clearly printed so that it may be read from the platform. By this arrangement when any one rises in the house the president may at once recognize him as the gentleman from the diocese bearing the name of the standard by him. Los Angeles and Newark were the lucky dioceses drawing the much coveted front seats. The front seats on the eastern aisle were reserved for the missionary delegates, being assigned to a wide range of jurisdictions under the care of the house. By regular custom of the house, the front seats of the western aisle were given to the delegation from the Diocese of Virginia, the diocese entertaining the convention, being awarded a wide range of seats in fact having their choice before the drawing by lot began.

Hotel lobbies were well filled with clerical gentlemen last night. Early in the afternoon the Jefferson and the Richmond reported to the committee of arrangements that the rooms were taken, and Murphy's is known to be well filled, having with their two annex buildings in their convenient location, possibly the largest number of members of two houses of the convention of any hostelry in the city.

The committee on hospitality still has lists of available boarding places in various parts of the town, and those wishing to take convention boarders should notify them by phone to-day, as many will no doubt come in without having made previous arrangements.

Dr. Anstie at Richmond. In the basement of St. Paul's Church to-day will be found the offices of the committee of arrangements and the office for validating tickets for all the railroads. The Richmond post-office will open a branch office this morning in the primary classroom of the basement of the church in charge of the committee from the general post-office. It was reported last night that eight sacks of mail were already in the general post-office for distribution, and the secretaries and chairmen of the convention are busy preparing for the opening up of mail facilities.

Dr. Anstie, the secretary of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies, is stopping at the Richmond Hotel, having arrived yesterday morning from Washington, coming with him only a solid trainload of delegates and visitors, the party including many ladies.

Dr. Anstie is busy preparing his roll of the convention, the secretary of each diocese having the duty of certifying to him in regular form the election of the deputies from that diocese, and in the event of their not coming, of the selection of their alternates. There will be no definite way of telling, however, the many of the deputies are in Richmond, since there is no system of registration required, other than in the case of those whose tickets have to be validated by the railroad office.

Following the opening session of the convention to-morrow will come, at 3:30 P. M., the first business meeting of the two bodies in their separate halls for organization and the election of officers, and for the outlining of their work during this session of the convention.

The first business of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies will be the calling of the roll by the secretary from the certificates sent in by the diocesan secretaries, and no delegate will be entitled to register until he has written credentials in the hands of the secretary of the convention. After the house is once organized a committee on credentials and elections is appointed, and all those coming in after the roll call, and all cases of al-ferates taking the place of the principal delegates, are referred to this committee for their approval.

Dr. McKim Will Preside.

Following the roll call the secretary notes the presence of representatives from a majority of the dioceses, which constitutes a quorum, and the house proceeds to the election of officers. McKim, the present president, was elected at the last convention, and his made a most satisfactory and efficient presiding officer, and it was not thought among those delegates who arrived yesterday that he would have any opposition for re-election. Similarly it is not thought that any change will be made in the position of secretary of the convention, the present officer, Rev. Henry Anstie, D. D., of New York, who was elected as secretary at the Boston convention, having had long experience as an assistant secretary and a wide range of jurisdiction in the convention, which renders him especially well fitted for the duties of his office. The House of Clerical and Lay Deputies voted down at the Boston convention a proposition introduced to have a vice-president, and McKim, the present president, the adoption of rules of order, provision for a number of standing committees, and an exchange of messages with the House of Bishops will probably complete the business of the afternoon, and the body will meet for the first session of the convention at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. A platform has been erected across the front of St. Paul's Church for the use of the officers of the convention. A curtain ropes off the chancel and communion table. In the center of the platform, just in front of the chancel, will be a speaker's stand or small pulpit to which any member of the house will be invited who proposes to make a short address. In the front pews across the church are seated the representatives of the press, and galleries are open to the public at all the business sessions of the house except where special order is taken for an executive session.

Behind Closed Doors. Sitting in the State Capitol, where the Diocese of Virginia was organized, the House of Bishops will organize for business on Thursday afternoon at 3:30 behind closed doors, no persons other than the secretaries and chairmen of the diocesan branches being admitted to their sessions except their secretaries, who are men of discretion and judgment, and who are expected to maintain the secrecy of the proceedings of the house. Under an order of the house, the secretary of the House of Bishops, together with a special committee appointed for the purpose, will give out each afternoon a statement of what is accomplished by the bishops during that day. Their messages to the House of Deputies will also become public papers on being opened in the house, or in the branch of the church legislature.

When the bishops meet for business on to-morrow afternoon their first business will be the presentation of those bishops who have been consecrated since the last convention, in 1904. Fifteen bishops have been elected since the Boston convention, but at a special meeting of the House of Bishops, held in New York City on June 8, 1905, four of these were officially presented to the house, those being presented at the time being Bishop Aves, of Mexico; Bishop Knight, of Cuba; Bishop Woodcock, of Kentucky, and Bishop Darlington, of Harrisburg.

Bishop Griswold, of Salina, who was elected in 1903, but who was absent from the Boston convention on account of illness, was also presented at this time.

Bishops Presented. Eleven bishops are therefore to be presented to the House of Bishops at their first session to-morrow, although behind closed doors, will be one of the most impressive solemnities. Those who will be honored in this way at this session will be Bishop Strang, of East Carolina; Bishop Root, of Hankow; Bishop Spalding, of Salt Lake; Bishop P. F. Johnson, Assistant Bishop of South Dakota; Bishop C. D. Williams, of Michigan; Bishop Parlier, Bishop Coadjutor of New Hampshire; Bishop McCormick, Bishop Coadjutor of West Virginia; Bishop Webb, of Milwaukee; Bishop Adams, of Oregon; Bishop Tucker, Bishop Coadjutor of Southern Virginia, and Bishop Guerry, Bishop Coadjutor of South Carolina, who was consecrated a few weeks ago.

Following the roll-call of members of the House of Bishops comes another equally impressive service, of a memorial character, it being provided in the rules of order of the house that the presiding bishop shall announce to the body without word or comment the death of any bishop since the last convention and the date of such death, which will be read in the house in the Lord's Prayer, followed by a special prayer and collected appropriate to the occasion, and which is given in full in the rules of order of the House of Bishops.

The roll of those members of the House of Bishops who died since the last convention will be as follows:

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Benjamin Wistar Morris, Bishop of Oregon, died April 8, 1906.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. William Edward Morris, Bishop of Chicago, died February 19, 1905.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Samuel Isaac Joseph Schereschewsky, sometime Bishop of Shanghai, died October 14, 1906.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. George Franklin Seymour, Bishop of Springfield, died December 8, 1905.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Alfred Augustin Watson, Bishop of East Carolina, died April 21, 1905.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Thomas Frederick Davis, Bishop of Michigan, died November 9, 1905.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Isaac Lea Nicholson, Bishop of Milwaukee, died October 23, 1906.

Following the memorial service the House of Bishops proceeds to the election of a secretary, there being no question as to the re-election of the present secretary of the house, Rev. Samuel Hart, D. D., of New York, who has held office for twenty years, and who is generally considered as a most efficient officer.

The assistant secretary is appointed by the secretary at any time during this session of the house, the appointment being made by the approval of the presiding officer, the chairman of the House of Bishops. The election of the chairman of the House of Bishops follows. The rules provide that a chairman shall not serve more than two successive terms, but the present official, Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, was only elected at the Boston convention, and therefore is eligible, and will probably be elected for another term. With the exchange of messages of greeting with the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies, the House of Bishops adjourns over to Thursday morning at 10 o'clock when it will take up general business. The first business being the consideration of the report from the presiding bishop, and his official acts since the last convention.

Hotels Full of Visitors. Hotels in Richmond fairly swarmed with clerical and lay delegates, and visitors to the Episcopal Convention, which begins with the dedication and consecration of the Church of the Holy Trinity this morning, all of them coming in early, that they might be assured of getting room, which, owing to the large number of visitors now entertained in the city, is at a premium. The majority of the forerunners of the gathering hosts were quartered in the Jefferson, Richmond and Murphy's Hotels. At the Jefferson a sort of informal reception was held by Episcopal Richmond, which gathered the large numbers in the brilliantly-lighted auditorium to meet and welcome the numerous delegates and visitors who were constantly knocking in. Hardly a man who was dressed in clerical garb but was met with a welcoming smile, and an outstretched hand, and soon all cozy corners were occupied by delegates and friends engaged in earnest conversation.

A very train, which entered the city last night brought its quota. Many went to private homes, where they will be entertained during the three weeks of the convention, but the greater number went to the various hotels, which were well filled. With a more than usual overflow of visitors already in the city, it will be somewhat of a problem how to accommodate the greater gathering that is expected.
